Class: Intermediate Route: Too Easy
Enjoy it Yes
How long in class: 1 to 3 years comments: Good trial, although I feel a little bit on the easy side. Maybe this is due to the new elite class, but I feel that the intermediate route was too easy and therefore there was too little margin for error on the day. Otherwise a good trial.

comments: Blue route spot on, top red route riders will have a chance of moving up next year. Expert results looked to be at correct level which enables top blue route riders to move up.

Written comments: Very good trial, blue route spot on the eased blue route will give the top red riders a chance of moving up a class which was not possible last year, i just hope the future otc trials will be of the same standard.

How long in class: Under 1 year

Written comments: First championship trial at intermediate having ridden novice last year. Challenging and enjoyable but nothing impossible, all credit to those that laid out routes a good effort considering all the changes and certain amount of confusion there appears to be about certain classes! Good effort Ashford MCC.

How long in class: Under 1 year

comments: Although I found it a little on the easy side, a morning frost or a shower of rain would have affected the trial completely. I believe they had been working on setting up the sections over three weekends. And I appreciate everything they had done.

comments: This was the first championship over 50 event for 2008. I hoped that the course would be easier than last year as the events last year were in my mind too hard for real novices. Most of the riders in the over 50 class are really intermediate ability riders who for one reason or another choose to ride an easier route. Fine for them, but it tend to stop real novices from entering as the courses were too hard. I think the Dunlop got it right this time.
